THESIS PROJECT:

IDENTIFYING VISUAL CHARACTERISTICS OF JAPANESE VS. CHINESE TRADITIONAL PAINTINGS

OVERVIEW:

This project focused on building a patch-based classification pipeline to distinguish Japanese traditional paintings (Ukiyo-e and Sumi-e) from Chinese paintings. The challenge lies in the subtle stylistic differences such as brush strokes, decorative motifs, and empty space usage.

IMPACT & RESULTS:

- ✓ Achieved strong classification accuracy on the test set.
- ✓ Provided explainability by analyzing which patches contributed to classification, revealing distinctive elements of Japanese vs. Chinese art.
- ✓ The system successfully highlights unique Japanese features such as controlled brush strokes, minimalist empty space, and repeating decorative patterns.

TECH STACK:

Python, TensorFlow/Keras, ResNet50, PCA, Scikit-learn (SVM), UMAP/-Clustering, Streamlit (for interface).
